HANDLE FRESH-CUT PRODUCE SAFELY
By Deb Botzek-Linn, Food Science Educator
U of M Extension Service

Fresh fruits and vegetables are important to our health and well being. And as we eat more of them, we need to know how to handle them properly to help reduce the risk of foodborne illness. Although low, the proportion of foodborne illness associated with fresh fruits and vegetables has increased over the last several years.

Fresh-cut produce is the fastest growing sector of the fresh produce industry, according to the Food and Drug Administration. Salad mixes, peeled baby carrots, broccoli floret, cut celery stalks, shredded cabbage and cut melons are a few of the many examples of fresh-cut products now available in the produce department.

Peeling, slicing, coring, or trimming fruits and vegetables removes the peel or rind, which serves as the natural barrier to bacteria. You can reduce the risk of illness from fresh-cut produce by following these safe handling practices:

• Check that fresh cut fruits and vegetables like packaged salads and precut melons are refrigerated at the store before buying. Don't buy fresh cut items that aren't refrigerated.

• Check to be sure that the fresh fruits and vegetables you buy are not bruised or damaged.

• Rinse fresh fruits and vegetables under running tap water, including those with skins and rinds that are not eaten. However, packaged fruits and vegetables labeled "ready-to-eat," "washed" or "triple washed" don't need to be washed.

• Rub firm-skin fruits and vegetables under running tap water or scrub with a clean vegetable brush with running tap water.

• Never use detergent or bleach to wash fresh fruits or vegetables.

• Keep fresh fruits and vegetables separate from raw meat, poultry or seafood in your refrigerator.

• Throw away fresh fruits and vegetables that have not been refrigerated within two hours of cutting, peeling or cooking.

• Discard the product when the "use by" date has expired.

• Wash hands and clean all surfaces and utensils with hot water and soap, including cutting boards, counter tops, peelers, and knives that will touch fresh fruits or vegetables before and after food preparation.

SHOP YOUR LOCAL 'GARDEN GROCERY'
By Deb Botzek-Linn, Food Science Educator
U of M Extension Service

Farmers' markets offer a variety of fresh, locally-produced fruits, vegetables and other food products in a festive atmosphere. They are a great place to shop and fortunately for those of us in Minnesota, they are expanding and becoming more readily accessible in our local communities.

If possible, plan to go to the market early for the best selection. Walk through the entire market before you buy to view the selection and then return to the vendors of choice.

Aim to buy foods you'll eat now when they are fresh. Select an amount you can use within a short time, especially if you don't plan to can or freeze any of your purchases. Asking to buy a smaller amount is acceptable and most farmers will divide amounts.

If you have questions about a certain fruit or vegetable, be sure to ask the grower. This is one of the advantages of purchasing directly from the farmer. Most will be happy to tell you how it was grown, cared for and how to make the best selection. Many will even share a favorite recipe.

Go directly home from the market or plan to bring a cooler for storage. Fruit and vegetable quality will decline rapidly in a hot car.

Wash produce thoroughly before you use it, not when you bring it home. Fresh produce has a natural protective coating that helps keep in moisture and freshness. Washing produce before storage causes it to spoil faster. Remove and discard outer leaves. Rinse under clean, running water just before preparing or eating. Don't use soap or detergent as it can get into produce and make you sick. Rub briskly by scrubbing with a clean brush or with hands to clean the surface. Dry with a clean cloth or paper towel.

Farmers' markets offer a colorful variety of fruits and vegetables which are rich in vitamins, minerals and phytochemicals. Visit your local farmers' market to get a little exercise, visit with your neighbors and eat well.

THANK YOU NOTES

HAGEDORN

I wish to thank everyone for coming out for my Cancer Benefit on May 20. The support from family and friends was overwhelming.

A big thank you to Jody and Gordy from Bellechester Tavern and Darla Oelkers for hosting it, to the VFW in Zumbro Falls for allowing the event to happen due to weather change and Delila's Cafe in Zumbro Falls for catering the great food.

Also a big thank you to all those who took the time in their busy life to help collect donations and volunteering. Thank you to all the people and businesses who donated items towards the silent auction, and raffles. To those who donated money, sent cards, and all the well wishes. Words are not enough for how grateful I am.

Thank you,
Heidi Hagedorn 16-4c
