Spring Sports Injuries

Prevention matters

As spring sports kick off, athletes are eager to start practice and push their body. Knowing how to reduce injury risk can help reduce your child's chance of a season-ending injury. Learn how to reduce risk of ankle sprains, ACL tears and overuse syndrome in overhead athletes.

Physical therapists are often asked whether or not ankle sprains are preventable. Current research shows that an athlete's first ankle sprain may not be preventable. However, if an athlete has already suffered their first ankle sprain, they can reduce their risk of future sprains in two ways. First, the Swedo ankle brace has been well supported to reduce the risk of additional sprains when participating in cutting and pivoting sports. This is a lace-up style brace with rigid inserts on the inner and outer ankle to support side-to-side motion. The second method to reduce additional ankle sprains is by completing a balance and proprioceptive retraining physical therapy program. This type of program emphasizes the retraining of balance reaction time and the ankle's response on uneven ground. This program takes three weeks, or six visits, to complete in-clinic and the remaining exercises can be performed at home.

ACL tears are one of the most devastating injuries for athletes and are typically season-ending injuries. The anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) is a primary stabilizing ligament in the knee. Not all ACL injuries are preventable, but some can be prevented. Athletes can be screened to identify risk factors that will increase their chances of suffering an ACL tear. When screening athletes, we look for poor control of their leg during jumping, landing, cutting and pivoting. This poor control places higher torque at the knee and increases the risk of suffering an ACL injury during sports. A brief movement screen can identify these risk factors and simple retraining exercises can help athletes develop the control needed to reduce their risk of suffering an ACL tear.

Last, overuse syndrome in the overhead athlete can take its toll on an athlete's arm. These injuries tend to plague athletes that throw or play racket sports. Pain related to overuse syndrome worsens during tournaments, double-headers, and closer to the end of a season. Athletes can reduce their risk of overuse injuries by performing a low-resistance shoulder strengthening and endurance program that incorporates the muscles in the rotator cuff, mid-back, hips and core. Pitchers can take an extra step in reducing injury by abiding by "pitch count" recommendations provided by their coach.

Funerals have changed... and so have some funeral homes. Instead of the elaborate and somber services of the past, these days people are telling us over and over that they want "something" that reflects their personality, their lives and their values.
The trouble is that most of us don't know what that "something" might be and aren't sure where to turn. Funeral homes have traditionally been slow to change and lacking in creativity... but not at Mahn Family Funeral Home, Anderson-Peterson Chapel. If we've assisted you in the past, you know this to be true. If you've never used our services, we sincerely welcome the opportunity to share 90 minutes of your day with you.

GUEST SPEAKER:
Pat Zalusky, who has played a part in planning over 30,000 funerals, will share ideas, thoughts and suggestions for creating the personalized memorial, celebration, tribute or service you desire. Concise, funny (at times) and informative, this is a program you won't want to miss.
During the program, we will discuss several ways you can:
- Go "green" and lessen the environmental impact
- Make it meaningful without having it become elaborate
- Do something unique that leaves an impression
- Replace emotional reaction with rational thought
- Communicate your wishes to your family and ensure they will be followed
- Select caskets, urns and vaults (if needed) in a well-informed manner
- Remove emotional and financial burdens from your next of kin
- Protect your funeral money and other assets from nursing home expenses, creditors and other dangers

Everyone who attends will receive a FREE folder of take-home information.
Thank you for any consideration you give to attending this program, and we look forward to seeing you on April 11.

THANK YOU NOTES

SPRICK

Thank you to all who attended the Celebration of Life for Elmer in spite of the inclement weather. It was wonderful to see so many of our church family there.

Schleicher Funeral Home staff, Mike and Wanda, were very helpful in guidance and planning the celebration, as well as Pastor Tim and Pastor Duane.

Our thanks to the staff at The Bluffs who cared for Elmer while he was there and Dr. Foss and staff.

The Funeral Committee at First Lutheran Church did an excellent job serving the delicious meal from Marien's Deli. The cheese and fruit trays were beautifully arranged and we can't forget the goldfish crackers.

Thanks to Colleen, Deb, Kevin and Katie for their beautiful music.

May God bless you and keep you and make his face shine upon you.
